

LEGISLATURE TO QUIT BY THE FIRST OCTOBER

Montgomery, Ala., Sept. 6.—In order that Governor Henderson may have time in which to consider the general revenue and license bills after they have been placed upon his desk the 1915 session of the legislature will not end until about October 1, according to opinions expressed in legislative circles Monday. It was thought last week that the law makers would adjourn sine die about September 20.

Many new features are in the revenue bill and the governor cannot consider it in a day. The legislature is anxious to give him time to pass upon every section of the bill, as well as every section of the license measure. With the passage of the Weekly bill Friday which postpones the bond issue election from December 20 to January 18 there is no crying demand for the immediate adjournment. Instead, there is a sentiment in favor of a continuation of the session for at least three weeks in order that both houses may not be forced to rush bills through the last moment without giving them the proper consideration.

At least three days will be needed for the enrollment of the revenue bill and one day and one-half or more will be taken up in the enrollment of the license bill. Should the conference committee make a report on the two bills to the two houses Tuesday and the report be accepted on the next legislative day the legislature probably would adjourn for three days so the bills may be enrolled on non-legislative days. (In this way a legislative day will not be lost during the enrollment of the bills.)

Only nine days of the session remain. By using one Tuesday and forcing the enrolling department to work on the revenue and license bills during legislative days not more than five days of the session would remain after the bills had been placed upon the governor's desk. Should the legislature continue to work four days a week the governor would have only a short time in which to consider the many features of the revenue bill.

Speaker Carmichael Monday told newspaper representatives that he believed the legislature should finish its work as soon after September 20 but he did not think the work could be completed by that date.

RHODE ISLAND JUDGE KILLED FROM AMBUSH

Providence, R. I., Sept. 6.—Justice Willis S. Knowles, of the eighth judicial circuit, was assassinated just after he left his bungalow in North Scituate to take a trolley car for Providence today.

He received three bullet wounds, two in the back and one in the jaw. The attack occurred about a hundred yards from the house and apparently the shots came from the bushes that lined the village road leading to the car line.

After having been wounded at least once, the justice turned back and nearly regained the gate opening into his place when he fell dead. There were no witnesses and the assassin escaped.

Later the police detained two men on suspicion. They are Italian laborers, and, according to the police, one of them carried a loaded revolver.

Heard Voice.

The body was found by Knowles' housekeeper, Mrs. Wardell, who ran from the house when she heard the shots.

WOMAN AUTHOR TO MARRY LAWYER. TOO BUSY TO ARRANGE DETAILS.

Miss Jean Webster.

New York, Sept. 6.—Miss Jean Webster, lady novelist and playwright, whose "Daddy Long Legs" has delighted thousands in both book and play form is to be married to Glenn Ford McKimsey, lawyer, Tuesday. But Miss Webster is too busy with her literary work to attend to the details of her wedding. Mrs. Joseph W. Lewis, a friend of Miss Webster, is arranging them. The wedding will take place at a little church at Washington Green, Conn., where Mrs. Lewis has a summer home.

Miss Webster is a Vassar graduate and a member of the Cosmopolitan Woman's University, and Pen and Brush Club. Mr. McKimsey is a Princeton graduate and was divorced last spring.

McAdam Leg Broken When Horse Jumps

While endeavoring to hold a horse, and keep his little boy, who was under the buggy, from being run over and possibly seriously injured, E. J. McAdam, manager of the L. H. Moore Ice Company here, became entangled between the wheels today and sustained a broken leg. His right leg was broken below the knee.

The accident occurred near the ice factory. Mr. McAdam, who was holding the horse, realized that when the animal became frightened, he must do something quickly to extricate the boy from his perilous position. He tried to hold the animal, and was himself injured. He was given medical aid.

heard the shots. As she reached the lawn she says she heard a man's voice with a foreign accent cry: "Now, judge, I've got you," she saw no one but thought the voice came from the shrubbery. Justice Knowles was 48 years old and unmarried. His legal residence was at Cranston. His office was in Providence.

MEAT CAUSE OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys if Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their effort to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sour, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

AMERICAN AND SERBIAN GIRLS OFF TO SERBIA TO START AMERICAN SCHOOL FOR WAR ORPHANS

ELVA REED AND DORA GRUICH.

New York, Sept. 6.—Miss Dora Gruich, a Serbian girl and Miss Elva Reed, her companion, sailed from this port on Sept. 1, for Serbia, where they will establish an American school for Serbian children orphaned by the war. The school will be known as the Frothingham Institute and is the gift of John W. Frothingham, his sister Elizabeth, of Tarrytown, N. Y., and five Serbian friends, whose names are unknown.

Miss Gruich was in Serbia last May and there conceived the idea of opening such a school to care for the orphans and widows. More than a ton of supplies accompanied the two girls on the Greek liner Konstantinos. Both girls were dressed in a sort of uniform of khaki. Heavy boots and soldier hats completed the outfit.

Scientific farming and English will be the two major subjects in the curriculum of the new school.

ONE-ARMED MAN OUTWITS AN "INDIAN WOMAN"

"Indian woman" is the way the warrant read, briefly was the charge, and "pay that man back his fifty cents and the costs of these proceedings," was the verdict of Justice of the Peace T. W. Butler yesterday when the aforementioned female was arraigned before His Honor.

It's a sad, sad story, Captain, but it goes this way:

Sunday a certain Dothan man took a stroll out on a road leading South of the city where a band of several Indians are said to have been in camp. He met an Indian woman. She wanted to tell his fortune. With true Indian tenaciousness, the woman persisted. Now the man had only one arm. The woman grabbed his hand, the only one he had, and persisted in reading the lines in the hand. Men, as a rule, like to have their hands held, their nails manicured and such, if the operator happens to be a woman, and particularly is this true if it is a good looking woman. Men with only one arm are just as susceptible as two-armed men.

Now it must be remembered that the man in this case, as set out in the beginning, did not want his palm read; he told the woman as much, but she would have her way about it, anyway. All he could do was to wait and watch, use violence or run. He thought the best way out of it was to wait.

People don't care about having their past revealed. They knew the present. The future is what humanity is looking forward to. The fortune teller, keenly alert to these conditions, said that palmists were helpless; that is, they cannot reveal the future without first rehearsing the past and the present.

Yet there was a way, like this: by placing a coin in the hand the past and present is shut out, and the future alone looms up. As she held the man's hand with her hand, she took advantage of his position, and put her other hand in his pocket and extracted therewith an amount, according to his story. She placed the coin in his hand, and began her work.

Afterwards the man realized

60 GALLON STILL FOUND

A 60 gallon copper whiskey still was destroyed in Covington county by Deputy United States Marshal Fred Sheehan and Deputy Internal Revenue Collector Robbins, who returned to Dothan today. A portion of the beer and liquor, found at the distillery, was poured out and the fixtures of the distilling outfit were destroyed.

The officers brought back with them Joe Landy, who will be arraigned before Federal Commissioner C. S. Tutwiler on a charge of illicit distilling.

After spending a few days with his parents and friends in this city, Mr. Grady Harris of the reporter staff of The Mobile Register, has returned to the Gulf City to resume his duties on The Register.

Fresh fish, cooked or raw, at J. A. Stephens' restaurant. If that he was short fifty cents, that this amount had not been replaced, and he expostulated with the palmist but in vain. Talk was to no avail.

The man did not give a rip about losing the fifty cents, but the principle of the thing made him mad, and he decided he would recover his money, and this might also prove a protection to others.

So the man had a warrant sworn out for "Indian woman" and the opening paragraph tells what Justice Butler did about it. The "Indian woman" went her way looking for new subjects to work her tricks on, but she doubtless will not forget soon the "game" that failed on a one-armed man in Dothan, and hereafter she may steer clear of such and seek adventures in new fields.

COUNCIL WILL PAY TUITION FOR POOR CHILDREN

Children of school age in this city whose parents are not able to pay their tuition in the Dothan city schools, may attend free of charge, according to action taken by City Council last night.

When cases of this kind come up, Mayor Joe Baker will pass on the justness of such claims, Council having appointed him for this work. He will have to be thoroughly convinced that it is impossible for the parents to provide such funds, before any free permits are issued. The Mayor and Council will see to it that his plan and privilege is not abused.

The Council authorized the expenditure of $35 a month for a janitor at the City Hall building.

THE DEHORNING OF CATTLE

Not a Dangerous Operation if Proper Precautions Are Taken.

By R. S. Parker, Demonstration Agent, Chambers County

Prepared by Extension Service, Auburn, Ala.

The dehorning of cattle is a practice which rapidly grows in favor wherever introduced, and there is every reason for putting it out of their power to turn their horns against their owners and against each other.

A good job can be done with an ordinary hand-saw. It is very slow, however, compared to the shears, greatly increasing the pain of the animal. In using the saw, the animal must be rigidly secured, which increases the danger of injury from its struggles, especially with cows heavy with calf.

There are several types of dehorning shears on the market. The best has two V-shaped blades, which cover the horn by sliding past each other, cutting on four sides at once. In dehorning something over a thousand cattle of all ages with an instrument of this type, I have never yet crushed a horn.

Some cattle, however, have an intricate system of slender braces of bone extending in all directions across the hollow core of the horn. Sometimes one of these little braces is splintered and left loose or slightly attached. If these loose splinters are pulled off before the wound is dressed, no bad results will follow.

After the horn is removed, a small patch of clean cotton bannel is stuck over the wound, with the nap side in. Clean pine tar is then smeared over the cloth and on the hair around the wound, and if possible some of the long hair on the top of the head is drawn over the cloth and stuck there with the tar. This makes the cloth stay on better. Some of the animals will shake the dressings off. They should be caught again as soon as the bleeding stops, and the dressing renewed. Scrub the base of the horn and the instrument used thoroughly with an antiseptic solution before the operation. In most cases the wound will heal perfectly in a short time, as cattle are less susceptible to the pus-forming germs than most animals.

If maggots enter a wound, they should be killed with a few drops of chloroform, and the wound treated with penicillin to kill out the pus, and then sprayed out with an antiseptic solution every day or so until healing takes place.

Dehorning is done soon after calving, and weather suits in the spring, or just after the first frost in autumn. There will be little danger from flies and other conditions are most favorable for rapid recovery.

There are almost certain to get in the wound, and if the work is done in very cold, windy weather, there is danger of serious inflammation which may prove fatal.

At the age of two or three weeks, dehorning is a very slight and almost painless operation. The method consists in slightly moistening the horn with water and then rubbing round and round with a stick of caustic potash until the skin is raised and the horn is small. The stick should be dipped in water to protect the eyes. The caustic concentrated eye will burn if it comes in contact with a very moist stick. After treatment with a very moist stick, the skin should be rubbed with a dry stick.

COULDN'T SPEND HER MONEY

American Girl in Paris Was Entirely Willing, But the Government Interfered.

The girl who was born under the star of extravagance, whatever that is, was praised for her unnatural economy.

"Just think," her people said, "of having all that money over there in Paris, and not spending it."

"Don't blame me," the girl protested with unblushing candor. "It was not my fault. I wanted to spend it, but I could not; I couldn't get at it. In spite of myself, I was forced into the paths of economy by the French government."

"At the beginning of the war I solved all the business problems by making my trunk my banker. What money I had was drawn out of the bank and deposited in my trunk. That seemed a pretty safe place, so most of my money was left there when I went to London on a visit."

"I had made my home in Paris with an old school friend. While I was in London her husband died."

"When I came back it was as much as I could do to get into the house. The government had been in and had clapped red seals, fastened to the ends of a piece of tape, across everything about the place."

"My own trunk had not escaped. Right across the lock was a band of tape with these words: 'Liberty, Equality, Fraternity,' above and below. They did not represent much liberty for me; they came nearer to representing captivity, for I had run up debts, and the only money I had to pay them with was in that trunk."

"Then came such a bargain sale. It consisted of lace and feathers and jewelry that had belonged to a very fine lady and were going dirt cheap. They were sold at private sale and I was offered first pick of anything I wanted."

"For three months, while all the terrifying entanglements of French law were being unraveled, my money was imprisoned. When my friend's affairs were finally settled and the seals removed, the bargains I coveted had been sold elsewhere, so I had saved my money."

Pictorial Record of War.

No history that ever will be written about the great world war now raging will be quite as complete and striking as the huge collection of photographs, bearing on every conceivable phase of the conflict, that is being made by the general staff of the German army. Already more than 20,000 reproductions that range from soldiers in the trenches to wounded men in the hospitals have been gathered together and filed away for present or future reference. The collection is constantly growing, and requires a staff of men to keep in order and supervise. This pictorial record of the war is the finer because the government is able, through the rules which it lays down for all photographers who go to the front, to secure a copy of every picture that is made, by amateurs or professionals. The general staff, therefore, has been able to pick and choose for its own gallery the cream of everything pictorial that concerns the war, and has acquired, not only accurate and interesting representations but photographs that in a great many cases are artistic in the extreme.

IT RUINS HAIR TO WASH IT WITH SOAP

Soap should be used very sparingly. If at all, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it. The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulatified coconut oil (which is pure and greaseless), is cheaper and better than soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulatified coconut oil at any pharmacy, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

Save the Manure. One great advantage of growing livestock on the farm is that most of the fertilizing material contained in the feed may be returned to the soil in the manure; thus keeping the soil productive.

This advantage is often lost by failing to collect the manure, or by allowing the rain to leach out much of the fertilizing value. Every farmer should save all the manure he can, and either spread it on the land as collected or keep it under shelter.

HASTENING GERMINATION OF SOUTHERN BUR CLOVER

Boiling Seed Secures Better Stand and Makes Later Planting Possible.

By H. B. Tidale, Assistant in Agriculture.

Prepared by Extension Service, Auburn, Ala.

Before the seed of Southern bur clover are planted they should be boiled for one minute. This is necessary in order to hasten germination and to secure a good stand.

Three vessels containing water, and a pot of boiling water, are necessary for the treatment. The bags of bur, in convenient quantities for handling, are first placed in vessel No. 1, containing cool water and rinsed in order to remove the bacteria for re-inoculation. Then the seed are placed for a few minutes in vessel No. 2, containing hot water, to prevent sudden fall of temperature in the boiling water. The seed are then placed in the boiling water and boiled for one minute, after which they are placed in vessel No. 3, containing cold water.

When the bur are sufficiently cooled they are dipped again in vessel No. 1 for re-inoculation. The bur should then be spread out in a shady place to dry. If the weather is too damp for the bur to dry out rapidly, they should be spread in the field.

After this treatment the seed may be planted as late as crimson clover.

ITCHING ECZEMA IS DRIED RIGHT UP WITH SULPHUR

Use like bold cream to subdue irritation and clear the skin.

Any breaking out or irritation on the face, arms, legs and body when accompanied by itching, or when the skin is dry and scaly, can be readily overcome by applying a little bold-sulphur, says a noted dermatologist.

He informs us that bold-sulphur instantly allays the angry itching and irritation and soothes and heals the Eczema right up leaving the skin clear and smooth. Bold-sulphur has occupied a secure position for many years in the treatment of cutaneous disorders because of its parasite-destroying property. Nothing has ever been found to take its place in treating the irritable and inflammatory skin affections. While not always establishing a permanent cure it never fails to subdue the itching irritation and drive the Eczema away and it is often years later before any eruption again appears.

Those troubled should obtain from any druggist an ounce of bold-sulphur, which is applied to the affected parts in the same manner as an ordinary cold cream. It isn't unpleasant and the prompt relief afforded, particularly in itching Eczema, proves very welcome.
